QR CODES

QR codes have been around for decades but did not gain traction until 2017 when a popular social media platform began using them. Since then, usage has grown, with 89 million smartphone users in the United States scanning a QR code in 2022, up 26% since 2020. Including a QR code on an award or gift allows recipients to relive their memorable moments with just a quick scan.

BOLD Penguin is a commercial insurance company that is built for commercial insurance. The company knows how to use branded products to communicate and reinforce its message to stakeholders.

The company regularly honors their prized vendors, and communicates its company history, using a QR code-enabled video platform.

Sophia Hawkins works remotely for MattressFirm and was recognized with the prized Founder's Award. She received her award in her very own home and watched a personalized video that was created specifically for her.

The QR code makes it possible to create customized messages via print or video, delivered individually, in a way that is elegant and timeless.

STUDENT RESOURCES

The American International College showcases their student resources using QR codes that link to dynamic videos that offer the viewer a personal message. Viewers access these videos using a smartphone. This is a relevant way to communicate with students in a modern and effective way.

ONBOARDING & RETENTION

Onboarding and employee retention are strongly correlated with one another. A good employee onboarding process can improve retention as much as 82 percent.

Honoring employees for making it past their one-year anniversary is a business best practice for today's economy.

Fun Fact

Gifts featuring a QR code that links to a personalized video are a genuine way to welcome new team members.
